50th anniversary of the Outer Space Treaty in 2017

Time for reflection

- Are the existing principles of space law still valid?
- Are the provisions of space law universally accepted?
- Does space law fulfil the expectations of the stakeholders?

50th anniversary of UNISPACE I: UNISPACE+50 in 2018

Time for action

- Maintain the rule of law in outer space and the freedom of use
- Guarantee a legal system providing equality and equitability
- Aim at coherence for international space law (UNCOPUOS, ITU, ICAO) and between international and national space law (avoiding flags of convenience)
- Shape space law and regulations which support the sustainable and safe use of outer space (environment free of debris)
- Develop space law to build overarching bridges with other technological frontiers and human endeavours thus enabling future advancements
- Provide legal and regulatory provisions which support reaping the socio-economic benefits of space activities and the use of space resources

The contribution of IISL

- Only global professional association for space law with members from around 50 countries on all continents (members with important roles in international and national development of space law)
- Movement for the promotion and further development of space law
- Platform for discussing in a globally inclusive way the approaches and understandings of space law (symposia and workshops)
- Testbed for upcoming issues and new concepts of space law (e.g. space and cyber law, law for the space between air space and outer space, Space Traffic Management)
- Capacity building for and through the next generation (Manfred Lachs Moot Court Competition, paper competitions)
